Greg Wahl teaches developmental writing at Montgomery College (MD), Takoma Park/Silver Spring Campus. As a former Writing Center director at MC TP/SS and other institutions, Greg has long been interested in the use of writing in classrooms across the disciplines. Greg's doctorate is in American Studies from the University of Maryland, where he wrote his dissertation on the impact of the novel and movie The Bridges of Madison County on his home state, Iowa. He is currently teaching in learning communities focused on popular culture and college success skills. During the summer months, he can be found at the sidewalk café at Trio's Restaurant on 17th Street in Washington, DC.
